View Aim To Include Arabs For U.S. Entry As D.P. Bill Delaying Tactic

A Senate Judiciary subcommittee moved toward broadening the base of admission of displaced persons to the U.S. Testimony of witnesses urging that 10,000 Arab refugees be included in pending amendments to the Displaced Persons Act was taken. In previous hearings, the committee has indicated that it will go into the problems of Indian, Pakistan and Chinese refugees.

Senator Forrest C. Donnell, Republican of Missouri, acting as chairman in the absence of Senator Pat McCarran, made it clear that admission of Arabs would "reduce the number eligible from other countries." That would mean fewer from the already-processed groups in European camps for displaced persons, says the New York Times.

George M. Barakat, executive director of American Middle East Relief, and John G. Hazam, president of the Institute of Arab-American Affairs, urged the Arab admission move as a good-will gesture in the strategic Near East oil area. They said United States prestige has slumped since the war in Palestine, and that communistic pressures were on the upswing.

Mr. Barakat charged that Chairman Emanuel Celler of the House Judiciary Committee had "injected partisan political considerations" into the displaced persons hearings by saying that witnesses for Arab admissions "are bound to be anti-Israel." The New York Democrat is author of the displaced persons bill passed by the House that would raise the number admitted from 205,000 in two years to 339,000 in three years.

Mr. Barakat, whose relief group has sent about $350,000 worth of supplies to Arab refugees, who are estimated to number 1,000,000, said that repatriation and resettlement must be found to [illegible] Displaced Persons Act the definition of "eligible displaced person" would have to be defined to include a Palestinian Arab refugee, he said, and "eligible displaced orphan" would have to be similarly redefined.

The witness asked that the number of orphans admitted be raised from 3,000 to 4,000 to permit Arab admissions. Under questioning, Mr. Barakat said that both the United Nations and the International Refugee Organization ruled out Arab refugees as "displaced persons" on the ground that their status did not result from the second World War.

As a special hardship ruling he referred to a Department of Justice ruling affecting 125 Arab Palestinian students in the U.S. This makes them citizens of Israel, which would not permit their return. With funds cut off, he said, these students cannot stay in school. If they do not stay in school they lose their student visas. Mr. Barakat asked that these students be included in the category, "non-quota immigrant student" under the Immigration Act.

Mr. Hazam testified that because United States prestige in the Near East had been built up over a century by public-spirited educators, United States business men got many rights, "including the right to tap the largest oil reserve in the world, vital to the Marshall Plan."

All of this is "seriously endangered if not already sacrificed," he said, by "a short-sighted policy" pursued "under powerful and incessant pressure from highly-organized minorities" resulting in "outright support of Zionism." Three-fourths of the Arab population of Palestine had lost their homes to Jewish immigrants from Europe, Mr. Hazam added. The financing had been done largely with American dollars, to the "disillusionment" of the Arabs, he asserted.

The petition to discharge the Senate Judiciary Committee from further consideration of the displaced persons bill will not come to the Senate floor in the immediate future, the office of the majority leader, Senator Scott W. Lucas of Illinois, said. Reciprocal trade agreements and perhaps one or two other measures are considered as having priority over it. Proponents of the Celler bill openly regard the Senate quest into hitherto unconsidered areas of displacement as a delaying tactic, according to the Times.

Testimony that 40 per cent of displaced persons' applications for admission to the United States from Germany were based upon false documents in 1947 was received by a Senate Judiciary subcommittee considering new DP legislation the week before.

Representative Emmanuel Celler, Democrat, of New York, chairman of the House Judiciary committee, appeared at the Senate's session and clashed with Robert Arens, director of the subcommittee's staff, over the testimony. Mr. Celler sought Senate committee approval of his bill to liberalize displaced persons legislation so that 25,000 healthy displaced Jews could come to America from Germany.

At the same time Mr. Celler strongly opposed the Senate Committee's proposal to hear Arab spokesmen and American relief workers on the Arab refugee problem in Israel.

Mr. Arens introduced testimony he said had been taken in 1947 from Dana Hogdon, United States Consul General at Stuttgart, Germany, to the effect that 40 per cent of the DP applications for admission to the U.S. were based upon false documents and credentials. He also sharply questioned Mr. Celler's recent statement that the State Department wanted Congress to induce 15,000 refugees to flee Soviet-dominated countries.

"I checked with intelligence authorities," Mr. Arens said, "who said they not only did not ask for

Marry Under Rare R.I. Law

An elderly salesman, living in Brooklyn, N.Y., and his niece were on a wedding trip through the courtesy of a section of the State of Rhode Island's marriage law, the only law in the forty-eight states which provides that an uncle may marry his niece. The couple were married at Ahavath Sholom Synagogue in Providence, after they had obtained an after-hours license and after a rabbi had steered their marriage through the Providence Department of Health and the Providence courts.

The principals were Mendel Rosenbloom, fifty-five, of 140 Sumner Avenue, in the Williamsburg section of Brooklyn, and Mrs. Regina Pofstrong, thirty-six, of 500 Ocean Avenue, Brooklyn, the daughter of his sister.

Mr. Rosenbloom came to the U.S. many years ago from his native Poland. After the death here of his first wife, he returned to Poland, married, and had two children by his second wife. Both his second wife and both his children were killed in one of the early Nazi pogroms against the Jews in Poland. Mr. Rosenbloom escaped and was able to return to America, by various means, in 1942.

His sister's daughter, Mrs. Pofstrong, had been undergoing similar tortures at the hands of the Germans. Her husband was killed and she and her only daughter were sent to different concentration camps. Mrs. Pofstrong never saw her daughter again; she spent the term of the war in the Nazi concentration camps.

Three months ago, the transfer of Mrs. Pofstrong to the U.S. as a displaced person, was finally arranged. Mr. Rosenbloom was not a wealthy man, and his niece was penniless. They are, as far as they know, the only remnants of the family left alive.

They thought they might make a better go of it together, they explained, but all states, in America, have laws against uncles marrying nieces. Rhode Island, however, has a special section in its laws sanctioning any marriage that is in accord with Jewish law. In Leviticus there is an injunction against a nephew marrying an aunt, but none against a niece marrying an uncle.

Mr. Rosenbloom, therefore, applied to Rabbi Morris G. Silk, of the Ahavath Sholom Synagogue. Rabbi Silk determined that the marriage was Orthodox under Levitical law and, with the assistance of the rabbi, the license was obtained and the marriage was performed.

To Hang On To Jerusalem

The press and other criticism in Israel of the recommendation by the United Nations Palestine Conciliation Commission that Jerusalem be internationalized indicates strongly that Israel would resist even to the point of armed force any foreign attempt to sever Jerusalem from the rest of Israel. Military, diplomatic and civil sources declare, "it just can not be done."

It is a rebellious spirit but one based on what Israelis believe to be sound grounds. In the first place they point out that Jerusalem was the ancient biblical capital of the Jews, and, as far as they are concerned, it always will be—that is, the part now held by the Israelis.

Second, they point out that two years ago partition would have been acceptable and the Israelis were willing to abide by the resolution of November 29, 1947, of the United Nations Assembly setting up separate autonomous areas, but since the Arabs defied the United Nations by an attack on Jerusalem the day after the decision was announced they feel there is no further obligation to consider anything beyond their own welfare and future.

In the third place, Israel feels that Jerusalem was defended and won in a costly battle against heavy odds and that she cannot accept the recommendation that it now be sacrificed to an international regime that she believes would not be acceptable and might be a source of irritation leading to serious trouble.

The Government also stresses the point that the main issue appears to be the Holy Places, for which Israel already has guaranteed protection and will grant access if the Arabs do likewise, according to the New York Times.

To Call Up Men And Women At 18

The Knesset (Parliament) of Israel unanimously approved a bill providing for conscription of men between 18 and 49 and national service for women between 18 and 34.

Prime Minister David Ben-Gurion's security plan combines agricultural training with military training. The idea is that security for Israel is not merely a matter of arms, an army and fortifications, but a problem of forging a nation out of masses of immigrants who have poured into Israel from fifty-five countries.

It is acknowledged that friction existed among the immigrants, particularly between North Africans and Europeans. Mr. Ben-Gurion warned that if the breach was not bridged the consequences might be disastrous.

His security plan provides that men of 18 to 29 and women 18 to 26 be called up for regular service. They will first get some basic military instruction for a few weeks and then agricultural training in a frontier settlement for the rest of the year. The men will then receive a year's intensive military training.

The sharpest issue during the debate was the question of conscripting women, according to the New York Times. Religious parties, supported by Nazareth Arabs and a representative of polygamous Jews of Yemen, objected on the grounds of morality and chastity. The Knesset majority sided with Mr. Ben-Gurion, who asked the rabbis, "what makes you think a girl with a machine-gun is more seducible than a girl with a typewriter?"

Zionist Council Elects Lipsky As Head

Louis Lipsky, president of Eastern Life Insurance Company, was elected chairman of the American Zionist Council to succeed Dr. Abba Hillel Silver, according to an announcement from the Council's offices at 342 Madison Avenue, in New York. The Council acts as a public relations center for all Zionist organizations in the United States.

The result of the election appears to have completed the defeat of Dr. Silver and Dr. Emanuel Neumann, former president of the Zionist Organization of America, in a controversy between Zionist factions in this country for more than a year. Mr. Lipsky has been a leader in the opposition to continued domination of Zionist activities by the Silver-Neumann group. The Council's announcement said that the new chairman was elected unanimously.

Dr. Silver resigned June 16 and the organization's administration has been conducted since that time by a special committee. Earlier, he had resigned as chairman of the American section of the Jewish Agency executive and was opposed to the continuance of Henry Montor as executive secretary of the United Jewish Appeal.

Mr Lipsky supported Mr. Montor and that faction came out on top when Henry Morgenthau Jr., former Secretary of the Treasury, refused to accept the national U-

ABC and HIGH STANDARDS GO TOGETHER

In qualifying for membership in the Audit Bureau of Circulations, publishers are doing more than providing advertisers with the facts about the circulation of their publications.

They are also giving active support to the principle that advertising space should be bought and sold only on the basis of verified information — a principle that has contributed in large measure to the interests of all advertisers.

In Canada, the Canadian Jewish Review is still the only Jewish publication printed in any language reaching the Jewish community which is able to claim membership in the Audit Bureau of Circulations.

Leaders, Alarmed By 31 Per Cent Decline In Cash Gifts To U. J. A., Plan New Moves

Eight hundred Jewish community leaders from all sections of the United States, alarmed by a 31 per cent decline in cash contributions to the United Jewish Appeal thus far this year as compared with the same period last year, voted unanimously an emergency program to get money as quickly as possible for Israel.

Since 1939 the UJA has served as the combined fund-raising instrument for the United Palestine Appeal, the Joint Distribution Committee, and the United Service for New Americans.

Concluding a two-day conference at the Statler Hotel, in Washington, the delegates decided to make a particular effort to get payment on pledges already made to the U. J. A.; to run supplementary campaigns for U. J. A. in addition to those already in progress; to urge Jewish communities to make loans from their local banks at once and give the cash to the U. J. A.; and, finally, to establish a formula under which the U.J.A. would get the maximum possible allocation of funds raised by unified community chests and similar drives.

On the last point, there has been considerable pressure in some communities for a reduction in U.J.A. contributions and larger gifts for community needs such as orphan asylums, homes for the aged, religious institutions and similar projects, reports the New York Herald Tribune. Speakers emphasized at the sessions that if communities would defer their needs a little longer, the task of aiding refugee Jews, which began intensively when Hitler invaded Poland in 1939, would soon be virtually completed.

By agreement with the Jewish Agency for Palestine, top world Zionist body, three major collection agencies for Israel function in the United States. They are the U. J. A., seeking $250,000,000 for basic immigration and resettlement; Hadassah, the women's Zionist organization, seeking $10,000,000 for hospitals and welfare work; and the National Committee for Labor Israel, seeking $10,000,000 for projects of Histadrut, the Israeli federation of labor.

Daniel Frisch, president of the Zionist Organization of America, announced recently that his organization would raise $2,000,000 for its own projects in Israel, primarily for middle-class individuals whom Mr. Frisch described as the "forgotten men" in Israel. The U.J.A. opposed the Z.O.A.'s plan to enter the fund-raising field, and Mr. Frisch countered by asking

FREEDOM IS A CHILD'S WORD, TOO

Freedom is a child's word too . . . freedom to explore, freedom to express himself, perhaps even more freedom than is possible within the average apartment.

The need for new toys, new games, new experiences and above all the need to share them with other children are important problems to the thoughtful parent. Most important, your child's needs cannot wait. The habits and traits he is now forming are the foundations of all he ever knew, everything he will ever accomplish.

Many parents have found the solution to these problems. Here are provided full facilities for play, trained teachers and approved materials to satisfy your child's growing curiosity, and contact with other children to teach cooperation and provide pleasant companionship.

For further information about the Lod & Louise Kindergarten, situated at 1357 Van Horne Ave., Outremont, phone CA. 1646 or CA. 2826. Morning classes: 9 a.m.—12 noon; afternoon classes: 2 p.m.—4.30 p.m. Write for prospectus.

A. J. Kirshner, 5475 Victoria Avenue, Montreal, son of Mr. and Mrs. Isadore Kirshner, 5006 Park Avenue, and a graduate of the University of Montreal School of Optometry, developed a new system for training to improve the eyesight of athletes and school children, in research carried out under the auspices of the McGill University School of Physical Education. Beginning late in January, 1949, the McGill senior basketball team was given this new training to increase their range of vision. After fifteen training periods, some of the members had increased their field of vision by as much as 300 per cent; their reading rate had increased by 150 words per minute; and their understanding of what they read was even greater than formerly, at the slower speed. Mr. Kirshner was commissioned to set up a clinic for students with reading difficulties by one of the Montreal school systems. Howard Ryan, an instructor at the McGill School, has called this invention, the Kirshner lightning sight system, the first basically new discovery in the field of athletics in over fifteen years. In 1943, the Canadian Jewish Review carried the story of Mr. Kirshner's first major invention, the group vision test, whereby one hundred persons could have eye examinations at the same time. Mrs. A. J. (Florence) Kirshner is acting educational director of the Y.M.-Y.W.H.A. in Montreal. They have a daughter, Joan, aged two and one-half years.

Harold Newman, 3841 Melrose Avenue, Montreal, was awarded the first prize of $1,000 in the Canadian Bar Review essay contest, as announced by the Canadian Bar Association which met in convention at Banff, Alberta. Mr. Newman's brief was on "Breach Of Statute As The Basis Of Responsibility In The Civil Law." This contest was open to all members of the legal profession throughout Canada. Mr. Newman is a graduate in arts and law of McGill University, winning the Junior Bar Prize. The brief dealt with civil responsibility arising from breach of statutory duty, and compared the law of Quebec on this subject with the laws of the other provinces, Great Britain, and the United States. The preparation of the brief involved considerable research, mainly into the writings of the French commentators on the Code Napoleon, since the law of Quebec on this subject is derived from the law of France. The fact of being completely bilingual was greatly helpful to Mr. Newman in carrying out this research. Mrs. Harold (Lena A.) Newman is advertising manager of the Canadian Jewish Review. They have a son, David, aged nearly nineteen, who is an engineering student at McGill University; and a daughter, Elaine, aged fifteen. Mr. Newman is head of the Parks and Playgrounds committee of the Notre Dame de Grace Community Council; and is secretary of the West Hill High School Home and School Association.

Potatoes are plentiful and prices and quality are both attractive. This is good news for the homemaker who is aware of the excellent nutritional value of this food. Potatoes are superior to either spaghetti or rice in iron and vitamin content and their regular use in family meals adds up to a better diet for everyone.

Sitting behind a desk all day adds little to keep the waistline at the proper level. And wrestling with the other commuters on the bus or streetcar is apt to be more of a frustration than an exercise. Walking at least part of the way to and from work is an excellent way for sedentary workers to help keep in trim. And it's cheaper, too.

Immunization provides safeguards against smallpox, diphtheria and whooping cough. If your child has been immunized, the chances are almost 100% against him contracting a serious case of any of these diseases. Immunization is safe, effective and sure. And immunization is free. Don't risk your child's life by neglecting to provide the safeguard of immunization.

TURNING THE PAGES OF "CANADA UNLIMITED"

Picking his way between the stumps, the early settler scattered the precious seeds of grain which he had brought to Canada from his homeland. In 1665 wheat was so scarce that it was used as money.

Because clearing the land was difficult with crude implements, grain farming in early Canada developed slowly. The United Empire Loyalists who settled in Upper Canada in 1784 were the first to grow wheat in any quantity. The deep forests gave way to growing farmlands. By 1801, wheat exports reached a million bushels.

From 1813, settlement in the West grew slowly. By 1876 export of western wheat began. In the next fifty years, industrious pioneers transformed the prairies into a rippling sea of golden grain. From these farms have come world wheat championships—Marquis, Reward and Durum—for our daily bread!

In almost every corner of the globe, you will find wheat from Canada—truly named the granary of the world! In creating new and better strains, in growing and shipping grain, there's opportunity for Canadians. Yes, there's room to grow—in Canada Unlimited.

Just how much room is told in "Canada Unlimited", an illustrated 144-page book published by the O'Keefe Foundation. You may obtain your copy by sending 25c in cash (no stamps or cheques, please) to "Canada Unlimited", Dept. NS-17, O'Keefe House, Toronto, Ontario. Please print your name and address clearly. All monies will be donated to the Canadian Citizenship Council.*

OVER 12,000 GO TO J.D.C. SUMMER CAMPS

More than 12,000 Jewish boys and girls in eight countries of Europe and North Africa were spending their vacations in special summer camp colonies organized by the Joint Distribution Committee, major American agency aiding distressed Jews abroad. JDC, which receives its funds through the United Jewish Appeal, had appropriated $100,000 for its summer camp program in behalf of Jewish children in Belgium, Greece, Hungary, Italy, Poland, Tunisia, Morocco and Algeria. In addition to meeting the children's food, clothing and maintenance needs, it provided camp and athletic equipment, personnel to work with the campers, and other assistance. Funds from government and local sources supplement JDC grants for the camps.

Moses A. Leavitt, executive vice-chairman, pointed out that JDC's summer camp appropriations this year, the fifth since V-E Day, reflect a significant increase in programs for Jewish youngsters in North Africa. For the first time since liberation, Jewish boys and girls in JDC camps in North Africa outnumber those in summer colonies in Europe. A total of 7,000 North African Jewish children, most of them from poor ghetto families, were at camp this year, while 5,000 youngsters were in European summer colonies.

The North African group, consisting in the main of undernourished youngsters, are medically screened before being sent to camp to eliminate those with contagious diseases. More than two-thirds of all North African Jewish children picked to go to JDC camps this summer were too poor to bring their own clothing, and JDC had to provide wearing apparel for this group.

The cornerstone has been laid, and the building is under construction at the colony of Ein Hanatziv, where the Mizrachi Women of Canada are erecting a Study Center for the members of the colony, and all those who wish to come there to learn. The building is being erected in the name of the late mother of Rabbi Meir Bar Elan (recently deceased world president of the Mizrachi Organization) who influenced young Yeshiva students at the Yeshiva of Wolozin of which her husband was the head.

A Blue Eye For The Negev

By Yehuda Haezrahi, In "The Living Rampart," Published By The London Zionist Youth Council

On a rainy morning during the season when the life-giving water falls upon the thirsty fields of north Palestine, I set out by car to visit the southern Negev where a year previous to this, the first settlement had been founded.

In the northern Negev, a sparse, green fluff of wheat covered the hills. Farther south I could almost feel the weight of rainfall lessening. The air and the soil became dryer with every mile. The barren gaps between tilled fields lengthened. There was no more green fluff dressing the hills.

Such plants and thorns as were still seen were gray, lifeless. They huddled along the narrow ravines of the wadis where the scanty rainwaters congregate. Soon even those ceased. Now there was nothing but the Loess soil stretching far and wide, sterile and silent and seemingly endless, even in this, the most fruitful season of the year.

Down there three settlements had been established. Young people in their early twenties, boys who had come to love the green hills and blue skies of Galilee, and girls who had been accustomed to the soft scent-laden breezes of the orange-grove belt of the Sharon had come to face the heat, the nightly cold, the sharp winds, the hard work of the Negev. They had come to live here, to build here, to raise their children here.

Each settlement was walled-in by thick stone ramparts, and had a watch-tower. Each was a fortress as well as a place to live.

From here settlers went out every day to plow the fields with tractors and reap the harvests with combines, to tap for water, to plant saplings, and to analyze the chemical properties of the soil. They gathered agricultural data of the greatest importance for the future development of the land. Its fauna, flora, climate were almost unexplored, and the possibilities of agriculture untested. The land had been long dead, neglected. Now these young people brought with them life and song and labor.

The green saplings pushed forth timidly at first, then with growing assurance as they were tended with anxious care. Even birds came from the north to make their home with the settlers and pilfer from the fields of corn, maize and wheat. Cars and trucks drove to and fro. Meteorological stations had sprung up.

The Hebrew tongue was heard, and sometimes in the night Hebrew songs were on the wing, spreading from the small confines of the fortified points to enliven the darkness, wakening an old watchdog lying in front of a dark tent, and the Bedouin and his wife sleeping inside it, to a new awareness of the never-ceasing wonders of Allah's world.

The first to meet me in the Negev was a young Sabra, (native-born Israeli), tall and gaunt, and of an inner strength out of proportion to his years. He showed me the white houses, the cabins, the tents. He smiled and said: "A year ago none of this was dreamed of! There was nothing here. Nothing at all. I and three others made up the vanguard. We brought a 'lift' (a huge packing-case, almost as big as a small log cabin) with us, and one tent, three shotguns, and one tractor. We were met by the silence, the vastness, the overwhelming loneliness of wide plains. For two months we stayed here, all by ourselves, plowing the first furrows, marking the boundaries of our land.

"Every morning three of us went out to plow. The fourth stayed to guard the tent and to cook our meals. Sometimes I used to go for long walks over the hills. This land, this plain that seems so arid, so dead, to the unaccustomed eye of the stranger, is full of change and exciting life to the loyal eye of those who live in it. Gay flowers, plants, grasses grow here, the like of which I have never seen, in places where you would never expect them.

"And there are the ruins of old cities, the sites of the Byzantine Empire from the fourth century. It is the most exciting thing in the world to come upon these ruins, and explore them, and confront a world that has gone.

"Then the others came. They brought many things: builders' tools and agricultural implements. They brought, too, their cheerful talk, their laughter and songs. Yes, when our people came from the green north I was glad. Glad to see the houses spring up, the crops grow, the settlement grow, and our hearts grow with them.

"The first horse, the first girl, the first baby — everything was a 'first'—as though we were the first men on the earth. That is something I shall not forget. And, in time, when this is an 'old' settlement, with green groves, houses and children — when people are celebrating the 20th, the 50th anniversary, I shall not forget those silent months when I learned to depend on the vastness of the land, to get accustomed to its wide horizons . . . . But there's the lunch bell. Let's go in."

After a hasty meal I joined a group of workers on their way to Wadi Asluj, where a dam was being built. Down this wadi, dry most of the months, great torrents of water descend several times a year, after the rain falls in the western mountains. Because of the steepness of the ravine, the water flows at great speed, but not for more than two or three days, after which it leaves the valley as dry as before.

These wild cascades, tearing down from the hills through the wadis of the Negev carry the fertile Loess soil away with them. To stop the wastage of precious water and lessen the soil erosion, dams and large reservoirs must be built.

The work on the dam of Wadi Asluj had been going on for several months when suddenly and without warning a great deluge came down the wadi. The laborers had just time to rescue their tools, their tractors; they made an effort to strengthen the last section of the dam with rivets, but too late. The gushing waters tore everything down.

They broke into the reservoirs which were still unfinished and wrecked them. For two days and a night the floods continued, then everything became quiet, the bed of the wadi turned to mud, to dry earth, to powdery dust. And the work started again. The dam was rebuilt, the reservoirs repaired.

When I saw the dam it was nearly finished. And when the next rain came, it was ready to receive the mountain water, turn them into new channels, catch them in the reservoirs. The wild flood-streams of the Negev had been tamed, their powers harnessed to the needs of man.

The engineer supervising the construction was a little man, bald, emaciated, who spent all day at the dam, and in the evenings met the foremen and discussed their schedules with them. At night he bent over his drawing-board, his logarithms, calculating. The night watchman had orders to wake him every morning at three o'clock, the hour he wakes the cowman. Then he started again. Once his wife came all the way from Tel-Aviv to see him. When he heard of her arrival, he looked at his watch and said: "An interruption of two hours at least . . . "

Full of pride, he pointed out the huge reservoirs. Tractors were panting, scraping at the soil, deepening the level. From these reservoirs, pipelines would carry water to the fields during winter. Another smaller reservoir had been constructed, its walls laid out in smooth asphalt, to hold the water for the long, dry seasons of the year.

"We are practically ready now for the onslaught of the new rains," the engineer said. "The dam will check the flow and divert it into channels we dug, and the

Israel Embattled Shows The Country Promises An Adequate Future

By Fannie Haber

Editorial Note: The following was originally a private letter from Tel Aviv, sent to friends in the United States by the wife of Professor William Haber, of the University of Michigan, the Adviser on Jewish Affairs to General Lucius D. Clay, American Occupation Commander in Germany, at the time it was written. Mrs. Haber graciously consented to its publication in The Menorah Journal from which it is reprinted here.

Bill and I have spent fifteen days in Israel, during the middle of October (1948). His purpose was to see how the recently arrived displaced persons were faring and what the economic and social prospects were for the others still in Europe. I went along in my usual capacity, as freight. If he were writing this letter it would be a meaty treatise full of quotable data; but since he is busy putting his findings into action, I am the chronicler.

We left Heidelberg for Paris by train and from there by plane to Haifa, Israel. We took off at 10 p.m., stopping in Rome for a 4 a.m. breakfast, then Athens at midmorning, arriving in Haifa at 4 p.m., a total of fifteen hours flying time. After going through the ceremonies and greetings from the United States and Israeli officials, we drove to Tel Aviv, spent the night at the Kaeta Dan Hotel, headquarters of United Nations observers, and in the morning went to the home of James McDonald, the American Representative to Israel. This was our headquarters in Tel Aviv.

The Israeli Foreign Office took charge of us, and most of our trips were under its guidance and protection. We visited every city and most villages, numerous farm colonies, agricultural settlements, the agricultural experimental school, vocational schools, children's nurseries, factories, battle lines, housing projects for workers, slums of Tel Aviv, the synagogues, Arab villages, a concert, an Israeli-made movie, the Sieff and Weizmann Scientific Institute, hospitals, camps where 12,000 displaced persons are temporarily housed when they arrive in Israel and await assignment to homes, work or army service; and we talked with all high Government officials from Presiwaters will gather in this reservoir. And, think of it, when this happens, here in the middle of the dry desert it will glitter in the sunlight. A blue eye for the blind face of the Negev."

He added, "I told the settlement boys to build themselves some canoes, then they will be able to row the girls about on our lake on moonlight nights."

On my way back, I stopped at the settlement's "meteorological station," a small cabin. The meteorological expert, a smiling Sabra, asked me to step in. He explained his charts, his maps, the instruments used to measure the density of vapors in the air, the temperature at different levels, the amount of rain and dew, the strength of the wind.

He gave it as his considered opinion that the climate of the Negev was really very healthful, even better than that of the coastal plain. And once the ground was covered with trees as wind-breaks, it would be paradise.

The meteorological expert was just 19. He was interested in everything to do with the Negev. Its history was a virgin field, he said. Little had been written about it—a few books on the significance of place-names, their Biblical connections and post-Biblical population. But what little there was, he had on his shelves.

He also had a collection of coins and fragments of statuary found in the ruins of old towns and townlets of the Negev. He could tell me all about the lower geological strata, those that stretched underneath the Loess, and he had a theory as to how they had been formed.

Later, I heard that experts who had come down from the University to study this question had found his card-index, his charts, his library, his collection and his theories of great help. In books and booklets they published later in Jerusalem, his name was mentioned and tribute paid to the extraordinary accuracy and efficiency of his experiments.

Meanwhile, he took me to the dining-room for a cup of tea. Evening was falling rapidly, the lamp had been lighted and shed its white light over the bare boards of the tables, the thick cups, the slices of bread, the jam, and the settlers who thronged in after their day's labor.

There was the "planter," the youth in charge of all those tender saplings that one day would form the orchards, and near him his friends who was responsible for the vegetable plots. Both bent over their papers where experiments with various chemical manures were recorded, with an estimate of the expenses, suggestions for future plantations, and some expert advice.

These papers came from the Agricultural Institute of Rehovoth, to which our friends had reported their success and failures. Now they studied the answers carefully.

Near them two others were engaged in a noisy dispute: one, a Venetian, extolled the beauties of his home town; the other, a Roman, would have none of it. Leonardo da Vinci and Michelangelo were summoned as witnesses to Rome's grandeur, the doges and senate of Venice were called. Names of palaces, bridges, famous paintings and statues rebounded from quick lips.

At last the fair-headed, blue-eyed cook from Koenigsberg was called out of the kitchen to act as referee. She came, her sleeves rolled up over her arms, and put the quick southerners in their place. "Do you want your soup for dinner, or don't you? If you go on boring us, you won't get any! Shalom to you!" And back she went to her kitchen, acclaimed by a swarthy youth, a native of Egypt. On kitchen duty that day and arrayed in a large apron, he was wiping the tables clean for the evening meal.

The tractors came back from their work in the fields and at the dam, and the workers filed in. Their spokesman, an old Yemenite, called, "Abraham our father, blessed be the souls of the righteous," came to proclaim on their behalf that, praise the Lord, their appetities were satisfactory, and that the "stuffed turkeys and champagne" should be brought on.

The cabin filled, there was laughter and talk. People sat closer along the wooden benches to make room for newcomers, and to get warmer as the night grew chillier. The swarthy fellow in the big apron brought the steaming soup. The fair-haired girl came out from her kitchen, her eyes softened and at peace.

Outside the night grew darker. The night watchmen put on their leather jackets lined with sheep's wool and took up their rifles. I went out with them. The vast sky spreading over the vast earth, the silence, the loneliness of the place and the glory of it, filled my heart with happiness. I felt humble and proud all at once. Our hopes were high. Our hearts were brave. There was peace in the night. Peace in the land.

CLASS IN COOKERY

PEANUT BUTTER CAKE

one-half cup shortening
one-half cup peanut butter
one and one-half cups brown sugar
two beaten eggs
one teaspoon vanilla
two-thirds cup milk
one and one-half cups cake flour
one-half teaspoon salt
two teaspoons baking powder

Cream shortening, peanut butter, and sugar. Add eggs and vanilla, and beat well. Add milk, alternately with the flour, baking powder, salt, which have been sifted together, beating after each addition. Pour into a nine-inch-square cake pan, which has been lined with wax paper, slightly greased. Bake in a 350-degree oven, for fifty minutes. When cool, ice with a plain butter icing, made by mixing together one tablespoon melted or soft creamed butter, one-half teaspoon vanilla, and powdered sugar, with a little cream, until icing is thick enough to spread.

Mrs. C. Steinberg,
3753 Mackenzie Avenue, Montreal.

MELTAWAYS

three-quarters pound butter
one-half cup fruit sugar
one pound of dessicated coconut two and one-half cups all-purpose flour
one-eighth teaspoon salt

Mix all together using tips of fingers. Roll into shapes of small fingers. Bake on ungreased cookie sheet, in moderate oven, 350 degrees, for ten minutes. Sprinkle with powdered sugar when done.

Mrs. B. Rubinoff,
29 Northcliffe Boulevard, Toronto.

ISRAEL EMBATTLED SHOWS THE COUNTRY PROMISES AN ADEQUATE FUTURE

dent Weizmann down, as well as with United Nations officials.

With an armed chauffeur and the public relations man from the Israeli Foreign Office we travelled throughout Israel except the Negeb. Our trip through the Galilee followed, in general, this route: from Tel Aviv along the coast to Nathanya, then inland to Hadera and Nazareth, which is a Christian-Arab town surrendered almost intact to the Israelis. The Christian Arabs are friendly and have not evacuated Israel like the Moslem Arabs. Tiberias, our next city, is below sea level; its heat must have been the inspiration for Dante's Inferno.

We crossed the Sea of Galilee in a motor launch to the fishing kibbutz Ein Gev, which had been under heavy fire from Syrian guns on the overhanging hills. (A kibbutz is a cooperative colony, generally for farming.) We visited several kibbutzim throughout this area and were appalled by the awful diversion of manpower from their economic activities to building trenches and air-raid shelters. These fortifications are not of a temporary nature, but most definitely for future protection as well.

Drove then to Safad, an ancient biblical town in northernmost Galilee, which was partially destroyed during fighting before the truce. No Arabs are left there. We stopped at the kibbutz Ramat Naftali on the Syrian border. It had been under heavy shelling in May, and all its farming facilities were destroyed; it is now held by the Israelis as a military outpost. Once this kibbutz specialized in leghorn poultry; but during the siege, when there was not a drop of water available to the settlers, all poultry was killed off. The whole area was now littered with feathers. Visited the fortress near Rosh Pinah where Israeli casualties were terrific. What was left of twenty-eight boys who assaulted and captured this stronghold is buried in one grave.

Then we doubled back to Tiberias to see if it is always so hot (it is); and on to Haifa, which I think is the most beautiful city in Israel. The Mediterranean washing against the base of Mount Carmel, with its eggshell-colored houses across its whole breast, gives Haifa top score.

N.Y. MUSEUM SHOWS BIRTH OF ISRAEL

"Birth of a State", a new exhibition scheduled to run until the beginning of December, has been arranged by the Jewish Museum, 92nd Street and Fifth Avenue, New York, and is now open to the public, according to an announcement by the Jewish Theological Seminary of America under whose auspices the Museum is conducted.

This exhibit attempts to show, through pictorial representation supplemented with maps and charts, the evolution of the Yishuv in Eretz Yisroel into statehood. With the cooperation of the Israeli Embassy in Washington, D.C., which had part of the material on display in the Library of Congress, the Israeli Consulate in New York, and the Histadrut Foto News, it spans the period beginning with the forerunners of the modern Zionist movement to the recognition of the state by the United Nations.

The Jewish Museum, whose activities are mainly devoted to Jewish arts and crafts, presents this exhibit, too, as background for a study of new developments of science, industry and arts in the State of Israel. Together with the aforementioned pictorial material, the display offers, with the assistance of the Palestine Galleries for Arts and Crafts, Inc., a selection of new works executed by modern Israeli artisans, including ceramics, metalwork, illustrated literature, paintings, jewelry, pottery, toys, and religious and ceremonial objects of contemporary design.

During the early part of November, "Birth of a State" will be augmented by a comprehensive show of works by painters and sculptors of Israel.

The Eighth Plenary Session Of The Canadian Jewish Congress

By Edward E. Calber, Of Toronto

A Plenary Session of the Canadian Jewish Congress should be regarded as an important event in the life of Canadian Jewry. It is a formal convocation of the representatives of our people in this country. Before it should pass in review the history of the period that has just elapsed, the problems that are current, and the charting of a course for the future. The Plenary Session that is to take place in Toronto on October 22-24 must be made the occasion for just such a three-fold examination.

This will be the first Congress Plenary Session since the creation of the State of Israel. This event in itself is of profound significance to Jewry everywhere. In a very substantial way, our lives as Jews in Canada should become more normal by virtue of the State of Israel coming into being. This normality in a purely subjective sense, results from a progressive transference of emotional emphasis from scenes of tragedy, extermination camps, D.P. centres, and all the visible evidences of horror and hardship to the feeling of satisfaction we experience in knowing that, at long last, there is a place for all Jews to go who wish relief from tragedy and dislocation.

Naturally, the mere fact of Israel becoming a state does not, and cannot relieve us of our responsibility for many years to come from providing heavy financial means to enable Israel to do the gigantic job of absorption of several millions of souls in the space of a very limited number of years. Statehood alone does not provide the inexhaustible funds for immigration absorption. We need only recall the serious plight major nations like Great Britain and many others find themselves in today in maintaining their settled populations, let alone opening their doors for all who wish to come, to realize the magnitude of the tasks Israel has deliberately set itself to fulfill in a short space of time.

But, in spite of the challenge that history now confronts us with, we have the profound satisfaction of knowing that a milestone of millenial dimensions has been reached. We can now permit problems of Canadian Jewish life to share our attention and interest together with the other ones we have known in our generation which has been a generation both of tragedy and fulfillment.

In this Plenary Session we must examine the structure of our organization to ascertain whether it is fitted for the tasks which diaspora Jewry will now be called on to play. We must redefine the duties and ideals that lie before us and devise the necessary apparatus to enable us to make Jewish life in this country — to the extent that Congress operates in its designated areas — meaningful of dignity and satisfaction in Jewish existence.

That is no simple task. It requires imaginative planning to maintain the vividness, the sense of connection and the satisfaction that can be derived from formal association with the Jewish community.

In a sense, the next years may witness a letdown because of the constant tensions in which we have lived for so many years and the relief from these strains which Israel has brought us. The Congress must guard against such a loosening of the Jewish tie, and provide the necessary directives and programs to make our constituency in this country excited at the prospect of a Jewish life that has worth and meaning.

Congress must penetrate into the local community and provide for it the necessary blueprint of community organization. Much more emphasis will now have to be placed on the local scene. We may be passing from an age of heroics to one that is more commonplace. We cannot continue indefinitely living on a diet of mass meetings and overcharged emotions. The essence of normal living is simplicity and quietness.

But these desired ends often produce boredom unless the organizational form is such that it can bring the necessary colour and meaning into one's everyday activities. Here is preeminently a job for the Congress to do. There does not, in fact, exist any agency in Canada which is competent to discharge it or which enjoys the confidence of all elements on the Canadian Jewish scene. This Plenary Session must place this item of community organization, with all the implications that the idea contains very high on the agenda of matters it will attend to without fail.

Within the framework of community organization, Congress must emphasize the centrality of Jewish education as one of the few guarantees of Jewish living on something more than a physical level. Jewish education must adapt itself to the needs and changed character of our times.

Let no one think that the interest of Congress in this vital matter is merely a pious or pro forma one. It is of the very essence of meaningful Jewish living in Canada in generations to come that the educational program throughout this land be stimulated, modernized and infused with the spirit of the times. Congress as the guardian of Jewish well-being in this country must dramatize this need and ideal to all its constituency.

Congress, too, must develop and deepen a spirit of cosmopolitanism in Canadian Jewry. We must never lose that sense of intimate connection we have had with world Jewry. There is, outside of Israel, a spirit abroad in many Jewries of the world to lose all their distinguishing identities through a consciously and deliberately planned assimilation. This must be combatted.

We did not suffer a two-thousand-year martyrdom merely to achieve our own undoing and disappearance outside of Israel when the combined fury of a malignant world was not able to achieve this in all these generations. A strong Jewry with an active sense of connection with Jewish communities everywhere in the world is the best safeguard against such a disaster.

There are, obviously enough, many other matters to which reference could be made and which fall within the purview of a Plenary Session. These will be treated by others on other occasions. What should be emphasized, however, is that Canadian Jewry to a substantial degree has its destiny in its own hands.

The apparatus of the Canadian Jewish Congress is the main vehicle which can serve this end. The Plenary Session should evoke a sense of excitement and anticipation that here is the forum on which these matters should be discussed and techniques devised to gain these desired ends.

the U. J. A. to allocate $2,000,000 for Z.O.A. projects.

Mr. Frisch and Dr. Nahum Goldmann, chairman of the American section of the Jewish Agency, conferred and it was agreed that no action would be taken for the next few weeks. During this period Dr. Goldmann will be in Paris, where he will discuss the problem with other members of the Jewish Agency.

The Jewish Agency, it was learned, is prepared to license those groups authorized to solicit funds in the United States for Israel. This would eliminate unauthorized and questionable fund-raising groups.

An indication that a unified fund-raising drive will continue next year through the U. J. A. was contained in a second resolution adopted by the meeting. This urged all Jewish organizations and communities planning for 1950 to refrain from making any commitments until after the U. J. A. has held its annual national conference in November in Atlantic City.

William Rosenwald, one of the national chairmen of the U. J. A., told the assembly that inadequate funds in 1949 "may jeopardize our magnificent accomplishments of the past ten years." He recited the accomplishments of the U. J. A. in resettling thousands of immigrants in Israel, but warned that the task is not finished and cannot be completed while more than 70,000 persons are living in tents in Israeli reception centers.

In a telegram to the meeting, former Governor Herbert H. Lehman, of New York, prospective Democratic candidate for the Senate, urged support for the campaign as strong as that given in the past.

American Jews have contributed $84,189,698 in cash to the United Jewish Appeal during the first eight months of 1949, compared with $122,540,516 in the same period a year ago.

Disclosure of the sharp decline in gifts was made by Magistrate Morris Rothenberg, of New York, one of the U.J.A.'s three national chairmen. He presided at the opening dinner in place of Henry Morgenthau Jr., U. J. A. general chairman, who is seriously ill in New York Hospital in New York City.

Magistrate Rothenberg made it clear that the situation is more serious than even the comparative dollar figures would indicate, since the number of immigrants requiring aid was more than three times as great in 1949 as in 1948. During the eight-month period of 1948, 62,000 refugees needing aid arrived in Israel, while during the comparable period this year, despite the reduced gifts, 180,000.

The U.J.A.'s nominal campaign goal this year is $250,000,000, but if last year's total collections of $150,000,000 is matched, U.J.A. officials will consider the campaign a success.

Recounting the repeated pledges by American Jewry to support Israel, Magistrate Rothenberg asserted, "If we are going to act as if our part of the job was finished, then we have entirely misled the newborn state struggling to its feet." He cautioned that if Israel is driven to the wall financially, her people "may become easy prey to extremism."

Eliahu Elath, Israeli Ambassador to the United States, said his presence at the meeting "is evidence of the deep concern of my government with the purposes of this emergency conference."

that, but that they are opposed to it."

"You'd better get in touch with the State Department," Mr. Celler replied.

Mr. Arens said recent information on DP applications for admission to the U.S. indicated that the falsification of documents was more widespread now than it was in 1947. His statement brought a categorical denial from Harry Rosenfeld, a member of the Displaced Persons Commission, that any such situation existed under the Displaced Persons Law, reports the New York Times.

When Mr. Arens said he had a letter from a member of the commission staff saying that the fraudulent document situation was even worse now, Mr. Rosenfeld said it was Mr. Arens' duty as a public official to turn that information over to the commission. Mr. Arens said he would turn over the letter, with the name of the writer omitted.

Mr. Celler and Mr. Rosenfeld agreed, however, that many refugees used false documents to get out of Poland and other countries into Germany. Mr. Arens suggested that they both ask consular officials in Germany what the present situation is.

"Mr. Arens' argument is that there are millions of displaced Hindus, Pakistanis, Arabs and Chinese, and that we can't help them all," Mr. Celler said. "That argument is like Marie Antoinette saying to the French: 'Let them eat cake.' Raising the Arab issue is simply confusing the issue. I don't think there is any intention of admitting any of them."

"Considering the political and explosive climate of the Near East, I inveigh against the proposal of Mr. Arens to hear Arab leaders and Arabphiles on the Arab refugee situation," Mr. Celler continued. "It would be ill-advised to give professional Arab pleaders the forum of the Senate Judiciary Committee to sound off their views, which are bound to be anti-Israel. The lifting of the arms embargo to the Near and Middle East bodes ill. Tens of thousands of Arabs will become potential bedouin bandits.

"Maybe the Israelis may have to give the Arabs another lesson and cut through their forces again like a knife through hot butter. Only this time the pleas of the United Nations will not deter them. They will shoot their way clear into Beirut, Amman and Alexandria."

Estimates of the number of displaced Arab refugees range from the Arab figure of 900,000 to the Israeli estimate of some 500,000. Last July Santon Griffis, director of United Nations relief for Palestine refugees, said he was carrying for 1,000,000 at an average outlay of $2 per month.

Mr. Celler's bill proposes to increase the number of immigrants under the DP law from 205,000 to 339,000; to extend the time for them to enter; and to modify the priorities now given to farmers and natives of the Baltic area.

Mr. Lipsky was president of the Zionist Organization of America from 1921 to 1931. He aided in setting up the American Jewish Conference in 1943 and was chairman of its executive committee from 1943 to 1948. He was managing editor of "The American Hebrew" for fifteen years and established "New Palestine" as the official organ of the Z.O.A.
